April 7, 2016

10 ideas and influences: Joy Garnett

Joy Garnett is an artist and writer who, for the past ten years has served as the arts editor at Cultural Politics, a contemporary culture, politics and media journal published by Duke University Press. She also publishes the venerable art blog NEWSgrist. On the occasion of her solo exhibition of new paintings at Slag Gallery in Bushwick, I invited Garnett to put together a list of the things that she’s been thinking about.

Joy Garnett is an artist and writer who, for the past ten years has served as the arts editor at Cultural Politics, a contemporary culture, politics and media journal published by Duke University Press. She also publishes the venerable art blog NEWSgrist. On the occasion of her solo exhibition of new paintings at Slag Gallery in Bushwick, I invited Garnett to put together a list of the things that she’s been thinking about.

[Image at Top: Fig 1: NY Studio (1990). I like this photograph of me and my furry friend. Here we are, collaborating on a backdrop for a theatre troupe. It was my first New York studio out of grad school and it had a lot of light and a big cage of doves. It smelled of cats.]
Fig 2: Night vision (source image). I keep many night vision images stashed for a rainy day to use as a springboard for painting scruffy-yet-mysterious landscapes.
Fig 3: Unmonumental (Ingraham St). I take long walks and shoot photographs of discarded objects, then post the photos to Instagram (etc). Walking is good for my head, and my finds are often poetic. For instance, in this image, the reflection of the nearby landscape produces an unexpected point of view. The ritual often leads to a day well-spent in the painting studio. I’ve been doing this for eight years.
Fig 4: Unmonumental (Nolita) 446. Sometimes my finds are jewel-like.

Fig 5: Unmonumental (Greenwich Village) 295. Sometimes they are abject.

Fig 6: Ridgewood studio (2015). Speaking of abject: I like the location of my new studio on the border of Bushwick and Ridgewood. The building is cinnamon-colored, like the walls of a 19th century painting gallery. It is situated between two truck routes, adjacent to an active freight train track. Right next to the tracks, a giant rose bush grows.

In 2016 Two Coats of Paint received generous funding from the Creative Capital/Warhol Foundation Arts Writers Grant Program. Thank you CC/WF for your continued support of independent art blogging.

CONNECT ONLINE

THE ARCHIVE

► 2016 (64)
► April (9)
  Art and Film: War and art's uneasy survival
  Newness: Melissa Meyer at Lennon, Weinberg
  Two Coats of Paint Resident Artist: Danielle Mysli...
  10 ideas and influences: Joy Garnett
  Jonas Lund update, 2016 edition
  Quick study
  Catalogue essay: Raphael Rubinstein on Gary Stepha...
  Sam Jablon: Between seeing and reading
  Deborah Brown: Restless exuberance
► March (16)
► February (21)
► January (18)
► 2015 (174)
► 2014 (155)
► 2013 (168)
► 2012 (260)
► 2011 (175)
► 2010 (220)
► 2009 (353)
► 2008 (453)
► 2007 (382)

Subscribe via …

TWO COATS ON TWITTER
Fig 7: Sea of Love, 2015, oil on canvas, 38 x 44 inches.

“Sea of Love” (Cat Power)

Come with me my love
To the sea
The sea of love
I want to tell you
How much I love you
[...]

On my way to @SVA_News today to check senior thesis work.

Good morning ! #drawing #studio55washington #sbgoodmorningdrawings
instagram.com/p/BELj_tAJf6t/

My argument is that churches are like the new industrial artists’ lofts — leftover real estate that becomes a fetish curbed.com/2016/4/13/1140...
Fig 8: Lemon Ghost, 2015, oil on canvas, 16x20 inches. A lemony ghost ship.

Fig 9: Glacial Unrest, 2015, oil on canvas, 16x20 inches. The “unrest” of melting ice caps.
Fig 10: "Ends of the Earth," Slag Contemporary 2016. My friends are rad.

Related posts:
Blast Radius
Joy Garnett stops the passing glance

-----

Two Coats of Paint is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution - Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 3.0 United States License. To use content beyond the scope of this license, permission is required.

Posted in: Ideas and Influences, Joy Garnett

0 comments:
Post a Comment